April Sale Saturday 11th and Sunday 12th , 10 am – 4pm

A reminder that our sale is fast approaching. We have a number of volunteers to sell items and to help out encouraging people in to the Hill Institute over the weekend, but more are always welcome. I will put out a time sheet at the meeting on Thursday for people to sign up. I will also bring some posters and flyers for people to take and display. In the meantime if anyone can print posters to display anywhere some are attached to this bulletin.

Henry Taylor and Hamlet Tools

I am pleased to see that Henry Taylor is now selling their range of tools online directly, without going through any retail agents. For what it is worth, Henry Taylor Diamic range is my first choice in chisels and gouges. I even like the older carbon steel versions. You can find the new outlet on shop.henrytaylor tools.co.uk. Orders over £90 (not difficult to meet, they are not the cheapest range, though Hamlet is reasonable!) are free delivery.

Powercap respirator for sale

An Axminster/JSP Powercap is for sale. A popular lightweight visor and respirator, still in production. Note some of these have the JSP brand on them, some Axminster, but they are identical – JSP made them for Axminster – so parts are interchangeable. £100 including replacement face seals, screen cover sheets and primary filters. For sale by Phill Armes. Let me know in the first instance if interested.

Gallery

In the absence of any submissions this week, here are a couple of oldfern items made by Dan recently.

A toy train for his cousin's son's first birthday.

A personalised money box barrel in spalted beech (with a slot in the top) for the same boy.

A trophy base made to mount a drop spindle made by John Tavender, creating a trophy in his memory. John visited us in July 2024 to demonstrate some spinning techniques, when Keith Harte did a talk/demonstration about spinning.
